

Abel and Amaru: Abel Kavanagh - Born in Dublin in 1979. Lives in Lille - France but has a itchy feet and despite of living in France is a good turf cutter. Has a Master in sciences of information & communication (exchange between France and Peru) and a Master in documentary filmmaking (France). Amaru Durand Mitre forgot his birthday but is considered a serious earthonaut and fresh filmmaker overall in the space of very independent documentaries. Most of sometime he lives in the center of Germany and develops approaches to mind-bending film themes.

Daniel McKernan: is a New York based artist and most known for his collaborations surrounding the family of esoteric, experimental British group, Coil. He has curated two lineups of experimental queer shorts, which have travelled the world.

Too Old Too Ugly: is an independent production company set up in in 2009. It's first completed feature film is 'where the sea used to be'. The name of the company speaks for itself

Gavin Heffernan: A graduate of McGill University and the American Film Institute, Canadian filmmaker Gavin Heffernan currently resides in Los Angeles and Toronto. His experimental collection of five short films DEVOLUTION (2010)vimeo.com/9670121 premiered at this year's Florida Film Festival and Hollyshorts in Los Angeles, where it won an Audience Choice Award.

Doctors Without Borders/ Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF): is an international, independent, medical humanitarian organisation that delivers emergency aid to people affected by armed conflict, epidemics, healthcare exclusion and natural or man-made disasters.

Ger Leonard: is an award-winning Dublin based filmmaker currently developing his second feature film.

Triptych Productions: Eamonn and Basil met at film school, both determined to indulge their creativity through the medium of film. With a shared sensibility for rich cinematic style and stories far from mainstream, collaboration on numerous short projects during that college year was fate.

Adam Butcher: an award-winning filmmaker, currently creating short films and music videos, with my sights set on making feature films in the near future. I am a writer and director, but also love to use my talents for editing, animation and art direction
